Dear Student,

This activity book was created as a fun introduction to the California State Legislature.

California has a bicameral legislature, meaning that it has two houses — the Senate and the Assembly. Both are located in the California State Capitol in Sacramento.

The State is divided into legislative districts — 40 Senate and 80 Assembly.

The California constitution was written in English and Spanish.

During breaks in the two-year legislative session, Senators go home to their districts to meet with their constituents, the people who live in the district.

California limits the amount of time legislators can serve to 12 years. This is known as Term Limits. Senators run for re-election every four years, Members of the Assembly every two.

The legislative or “lawmaking” process begins with an idea. If you have an idea for a new law, you can present it to your Senator and ask to have it written into a new piece of legislation, or what is commonly referred to as a “bill.”

Before the house can vote on a bill, it has to be reviewed by smaller groups of legislators in committees. Policy committees discuss policy issues like education, and fiscal committees review bills that have a fiscal impact on the State budget.

Once a bill has passed the committees, it is presented to all of the Members on the “floor” of the house. This “Floor Session” is where every Member of the house can vote on the bill. Senators use a voice vote, answering “Aye” or “No” when their names are called, while Members of the Assembly vote by pressing a button at their desks.

A lot can happen to a bill while it goes through the process. To make sure things go smoothly, each house elects a leader to oversee proceedings. The Senate elects a President pro Tempore and the Assembly elects a Speaker.

This should give you a head start with this activity booklet. Have fun!

FUN FACTS ABOUT CALIFORNIA

State Motto: Eureka; appears on the State's Great Seal. It is a Greek word meaning "I have found it", referring to the discovery of gold.

State Nickname: The Golden State is a good state nickname since modern California's success started with the discovery of gold.

State Colors: Blue and gold are California's official state colors. They are also the colors of the University of California.

State Song: I Love You, California was chosen as the state song in 1951.

State Insect: The California Dogface Butterfly is found nowhere else.

State Mineral: Gold was designated the official state mineral in 1965. California has produced more gold than any other state and it can still be panned from streambeds today.

State Gem: Benitoite (also referred to as "blue diamond") was named in 1907 after the river, county, and nearby mountain range where it was found - Benito - and was designated as the official state gem on October 1, 1985.

State Rock: Serpentine was named in 1965. California was the first state to designate a state rock. It is a shiny, green and blue rock found throughout California.

State Flower: The Golden Poppy, sometimes known as the flame flower or the cup of gold, became the state flower in 1903.

State Animal: The California Grizzly Bear became the official state animal in 1953. The Grizzly Bear appears on the California State Flag and the State Seal.

State Tree: The California Redwood was designated the official state tree by the State Legislature in 1937. Coastal Redwoods are the tallest trees in the world.

State Fish: The California Golden Trout is found only in the icy streams of the high Sierra.

State Bird: The California Valley Quail became the official state bird in 1931.

State Marine Mammal: The Gray Whale, measuring 35 to 50 feet in length and around 20 to 40 tons in weight, was designated the state marine mammal in 1975.

California's Gold Rush: The Gold Rush began on January 24, 1848 when James Marshall discovered gold and triggered California's population to increase by 250,000 people by the end of 1852.

State Dinosaur: Augustynolophus morrisoni became California's official dinosaur in 2017. Fossilized remains have only been found in California.

HOW A BILL BECOMES LAW IN CALIFORNIA

A chart showing the route a bill takes through the California Legislature.

CALIFORNIA'S STATE CAPITALS

Sacramento was not the original State Capital of California.
California has had four different State Capitals from 1849 to present.

Monterey Colton Hall

(September 9, 1849 to October 13, 1849)

Monterey was the site of California's first State Constitutional Convention. During the convention 48 delegates wrote California's first constitution and discussed the need for a suitable seat for California's government. Offers for accommodations poured in from communities of all sizes.

San Jose

(November 13, 1849 to May 1, 1851)

The First and Second Sessions of the Legislature convened in San Jose. The Capitol building was a two-story adobe hotel. The Members disliked the building, as well as the town, and wanted to move the Capital from San Jose immediately. The Senate Committee on Public Buildings reported a bill recommending the relocation of the Capital to the town of Vallejo. The Governor approved the move on February 4, 1851.

Vallejo

(January 5, 1852 to February 4, 1853)

The Third Session of the Legislature convened in Vallejo on January 5, 1852. The scene was hectic and disorganized. Furniture and supplies had not been delivered and few if any of the buildings in town had been finished. A compromise was made that Vallejo would remain the permanent Capital while the legislators went to Sacramento on January 16, 1852, to complete the Session.

The following year, on January 3, 1853, the Legislature assembled again in Vallejo. Conditions were not much better and the Members wanted to leave Vallejo again. Benicia offered free use of its new city hall and a port of call at which all river traffic stopped. So, on February 4, 1853, the Legislature passed a bill ordering the seat of government be moved instantly to the City of Benicia.

Benicia

(February 4, 1853 to February 25, 1854)

The Fourth Session reconvened in Benicia. Bad weather and insufficient accommodations made Sacramento's offer of a free courthouse too good to pass up. On February 25, 1854, a bill was signed naming Sacramento the permanent seat of government.

Sacramento

(February 25, 1854 to present)

The first State House in Sacramento (1854), the new Capitol, was surrounded by no less than 55 hotels. Sacramento was one of the most accessible cities in the state with rapid communications available by telegraph. Soon after the conclusion of Session there was a terrible fire that destroyed the courthouse along with a considerable portion of the city.

Sacramento's second courthouse was ready for occupancy in less than four months. Legislation was neither distracted nor delayed when the building was completed in January 1855. In 1854 land was donated by the City of Sacramento at 9th and 10th, I and J Streets. Construction began in December of 1856 but was soon stopped. Members again wanted to move the Capital. The Supreme Court ruled, and later reversed itself, that San Jose was still the state capital. In 1860 Sacramento gifted four blocks between L and N, 10th and 12th Streets to build a new Capitol building. The Legislature appropriated $500,000 as a construction fund, and appointed a commission to superintend the building of a capitol. On December 9, 1861, Sacramento was completely flooded. On January 10, 1862, a second flooding occurred in Sacramento. The Legislature decided to temporarily move to San Francisco (January 24, 1862 to May 15, 1862).

Ground broke September 24, 1860, and the first cornerstone was laid on May 15, 1861. Construction took 14 years to complete. On November 26, 1869, the offices of the Governor and Secretary of State were occupied, and on December 6, the Legislature convened in the new chambers. California's Capital finally came to rest.

In 1958, the historic Capitol building in Benicia was restored to its original condition and rededicated as a State Historic Park. To honor the occasion, the Legislature moved the capital to Benicia for one day, March 15, 1958. Then in the year 2000, to celebrate the 150th anniversary of California statehood, the Legislature adopted SCR 54, calling for the Legislature to convene once again in Benicia to pay homage to California's rich past.
